

THIS IS NOT ABOUT BANKS. THIS IS A

PERMANENT CRISIS

daily, when the alarm rings, it comes over the kitchen table all the way to our work places and into the streets, right through our relationships and bodies, to our bank account, screaming for low wages, competition and mistrust. it works with our fears. this is the daily madness of competition, of capitalist culture. this is a permanent crisis. we wont pay for this crisis any more. we demand social security and free health care for all. free education and papers for the so-called illegal aliens, free public transportation, low rent . . . and tomorrow even more.

for a society based on solidarity, not competition, fear, capitalism, and war.

thanx for reading. you have a good day.
